¹ There are three ways of recognition:

- a) Diplomas automatically recognized in the Czech Republic according to the international agreements without any further administration procedures (applies for Germany, Poland, Hungary, Slovakia and Slovenia) <https://www.muni.cz/en/admissions/recognition/bilateral>.
- b) General recognition of foreign higher education in the Czech Republic (so called general "nostrification"). See <https://www.muni.cz/en/admissions/recognition?lang=en> – valid throughout the Czech Republic, the fee is CZK 3,000.
- c) Limited recognition of foreign higher education provided directly at the Faculty and valid only for admission into the specific study programme at FSS. See <https://www.fss.muni.cz/en/faculty-of-social-studies/additional-information/info-for-international-applicants>. The fee for this recognition is CZK 750.

The content of the interview:

- Discussion over the submitted dissertation project proposal with regard to the required academic level, its compliance with research projects, and grants of the relevant department
- Examination of English language skills (level B2 of the European classification: Understanding the main ideas of complex text on both concrete and abstract topics)
- Examination of knowledge of the respective research field as well as the eligibility of applicants for independent scientific and research activities.
- The entrance committee considers the documented publications as well.

Applicants residing outside the Czech Republic in countries with visa requirements may conduct an entrance examination via an online interview. The entrance committee will decide based on an assessment of the interview and examination of submitted documents.

The minimum score for being accepted is 60 points (out of 100).

We recommend

- Before submitting the application, ask for a consultation at the department of the relevant program, e.g., whether your topic is in line with the research profile of the relevant department
- Bring your Master's thesis to the entrance exam.
- The electronic application includes the title of the dissertation topic and the name of the expected supervisor. Find a supervisor according to their research profile and consult with them about your potential project proposal. You can also contact the chair of the relevant Doctoral Board in this matter. The list of Doctoral Boards of individual programs can be found at <https://www.fss.muni.cz/en/faculty-of-social-studies/admissions/doctoral-studies>

The Decision concerning the results of the entrance examination will be delivered electronically. Successful applicants who need a visa to study in the Czech Republic will get original of the Decision by post.
